WAR WASTE OF CAPITAL

PUT AT $40,000,000,000

Greatest Test on Financial America Will Come When War Ends, Says Banker

(By Associated Press.)
PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—With the conclusion of the European war, the greatest test on financial America, according to Alexander J. Brown, president of the Guaranty Trust company of New York, speaking before the Academy of Political and Social Science, Mr. Brown said that the waste of capital by the war estimated on a year's duration was $40,000,000,000.

He discussed the financial position as affected by the war, and after outlining how the country had reversed itself from a debtor to a creditor nation, said:

"The reversal in our financial position has been so sudden and complete that it really has been little less than a revolution. Most of our financiers have had little experience or training in international finance to meet the conditions involved in this sudden change. In addition, to this lack of experience we had to cope with defective financial machinery. It was not until the national monetary commission published the result of its investigations of European methods that we began to see how necessary it was that we should depart from archaic methods and adopt a banking system which would enable the creation of an acceptance discount market. The financial findings of the commission were wisely incorporated in the Federal Reserve law and comprises the chief measure of benefit that the country now derives from that act. State institutions have availed of this new feature in granting acceptances to a larger extent than the national bank."

"London has not yet drawn any bill of exchange in dollars. When that one day we may pride ourselves upon our financial resources. London financiers recognize our new efforts in the field of finance and applaud our aspirations. No matter how that market may be improved. At the present time she is concentrating all her efforts on the relief of financing the war. Nevertheless, we must recognize that she maintains as strong a grip as possible upon the markets which she previously controlled, and our debt to her is temporary unless we make our dollar exchange stable and our currency strong."

"It is essential that our manufacturers who desire to export their products should develop an efficient export organization. To this end they must strip the market which they desire to supply and be prepared to take the financial responsibility involved in the granting of credits and not leave this important feature to agencies. In the final analysis the manufacturer exports or must take the risks of export business rather than the banker. Our manufacturers desiring to export must understand that they must use the same intelligence in meeting foreign markets as they do in taking care of their domestic business. The success of this business should, in the main, be done through New York."

"The conclusion of the war will create new conditions and the greatest demand will then be made upon financial America. The destruction and wastage of capital occasioned by the war has been estimated on the basis of a year's duration at $40,000,000,000, and while it may not be necessary to restore all of this at once, yet from present indications the demand on us will be enormous. First, there will be the call on our merchants to furnish machinery in connection with the rehabilitation or rebuilding of the devastated country and, secondly, we will have to give credit either through making direct loans or through the formation of international banks."

"The foreign investors will participate in our securities actively and will be tempted to liquidate only at high prices. It is more than probable that the needs of the foreign countries will ask us for some of our gold in order that they may restore or build up their financial services. These demands upon our financial resources seem to present more than an active and firm money market. There is no doubt that we will continue to practice economies and follow the sound business methods which we have recently pursued, we will not only have abundant resources for our prosperous business but also be able to take care of the reasonable demands of other nations."

SEEKS TO FACILITATE TRADE WITH NEUTRALS

British Embassy Issues Statement Designed to Help American Shippers

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 4.—British consuls throughout the country were today in receipt of an official statement from their embassy here designed to facilitate American trade with neutral nations by pointing out shippers how to prevent interference with cargoes not under the ban of the order in council.

The statement recommends that shippers give notice to British consuls of the exact character of cargoes so the British government may be advised before ships reach America.

While the United States does not recognize the right of the allies to interfere with legitimate trade between neutrals or with non-contraband goods even when ultimately destined for Germany or Austria, the state department, to assist shippers, will to continue to the order in council, have printed the re-export lists of the countries contiguous to the belligerents.

Publication of the list followed informal consultation between the state department and the British embassy with a view to guarding against unnecessary delays and detentions of American cargoes by allied warships.

Wilson Hopes Situation Will Soon Be Cleared

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 4.—President Wilson today expressed hope that the Japanese-Chinese situation would be cleared up in a short time.

He had heard no word of any ultimatum by Japan to China as reported from Tokyo, and was not inclined to credit it, pointing out that from time to time since the war there had been similar intimations.

Reports that China had appealed to the United States for moral assistance in the negotiations with Japan the president declared to be untrue.

He said that the situation was improving in the sense that the boom of the various countries concerned were tending to become clearer.

COUNCIL AUTHORIZES CREDITS TO TEACHERS

Teachers Will Be Given Credit for Their Work in Other Cities

By an ordinance adopted by the city council Monday afternoon, the board of education was authorized to continue its practice of giving credits to school teachers for work in other cities. A second ordinance ratified the action of the board in giving these credits in the past.

Alderman Jesse W. Armistead, chairman of the school committee and author of the two papers, says that this action means that the controller's office is authorized to pay the twenty teachers the various amounts taken off the April salaries as the result of the recent ruling of the city attorney that the city had no right under the salary ordinance to give credits for work done in other cities.

According to Mr. Armistead, the new ordinance also means the board is now authorized to continue the credit system and pay the increased salaries to the teachers.

Some members of the board of education are of the opinion that the action of the council voids a 1912 ordinance in which the salary scale for teachers was fixed, and as a result has the effect of giving the board the right to fix salaries as long as it stays within the appropriation for the year.

The most important feature of this meeting will be the action on a recommendation by Councilman Claude L. Taylor that all four city high schools be combined and big high schools located in some central portion of the city.

CAPITAL CITY CLUB TO BUY BROOKHAVEN SITE

Members Unanimously Authorize Purchase—Edward H. Inman Nominated for President of the Club—Election Tuesday

The members of the Capital City club at their annual meeting Monday night directed the club officials by resolution to purchase the Brookhaven country club property, which the Capital City club has had under lease two years from the Brookhaven Estates company.

The Capital City club leased Brookhaven for $100 per month with an option to buy for $100,000, the option expiring June 1, 1915. The purchase price was to be paid in twenty-year bonds bearing 6 per cent interest. Since lease of the property the Capital City club has expended $30,000 on the golf course and other improvements.

As an inducement to the Capital City club to purchase Brookhaven at once, instead of taking the full time allowed by the option to decide the purchase question, the Brookhaven Estates company, some weeks ago, made the club a special offer, as follows:

To accept $90,000 worth of bonds, running twenty years and bearing 5 per cent. In payment for the property, and to expend $10,000 to $12,000 in remodeling the club house, provided the offer was accepted not later than June 1, 1915.

PURCHASE IS INDORSED. This offer was carefully gone over by a large number of the leading members of the Capital City club, and President W. T. Gentry and former President Robert F. Maddox, and was thoroughly indorsed by them, with the result that they held a meeting and passed resolutions strongly endorsing the offer of the club that the offer be accepted.

In addition to this action, fifteen members of the club voluntarily subscribed to life memberships at $500 each, making a total of $7,500, on condition that the club accepted the offer.

Notice was issued to the members that the offer would come before them for action at the annual meeting of the club Monday night, May 3, and in response to this notice the largest attendance in the history of the club turned out.

Alfred C. Newell introduced resolutions setting forth the offer of the Brookhaven owners and authorizing the club to proceed with acceptance of the same. Robert F. Maddox, Clark Howell and others made speeches in support of the action of the resolutions. They were passed unanimously and enthusiastically. Thus Brookhaven passes into the ownership of the Capital City club.

The plans for remodeling the club house were prepared by A. Ten Eyck Brown, the well-known Atlanta architect. The carrying out of these plans will make it one of the most commodious, attractive and attractive country clubs in the country.

THE IMPROVED CLUB HOUSE.

The basement will be enlarged and rearranged in such a way as to provide two large locker rooms, each containing 250 lockers and eight showers, giving a total of 500 lockers and sixteen showers, with a large lounge room between and with ample facilities for storing towels, bathing suits, etc.

Across the entire front of the basement will be built an open terrace, and the owners who desire refreshments without going up into the main club house, will be served on the terrace. The lake will provide very large additional porch space, which is very desirable.

THE NEW ROOF GARDEN.

Above the first floor will be the best single feature of the remodeling plan—a magnificent enclosed roof garden for dancing in summer and winter. It will have windows and screens, so that in summer it will get a breeze on four sides while in winter the windows will be closed and the roof garden heated. Opening from the roof garden will be a large open terrace on the roof of the front portion, and the back will be two large open terraces on the roof of the back porch, with the stairs and landings between.

These additions, together with certain changes in the exterior trim and with the necessary repainting and redecorating, will make the club house thoroughly modern in every detail, and will afford numerous special features which are possessed by few country clubs in America.

Work on the golf course has progressed steadily since the Capital City club leased Brookhaven two years ago, with the result that the second nine holes are now practically completed, and James McKelvie, inspector and superintendent, estimates that $2,500 will finish the full eighteen holes for play and maintain the course for a year. This amount will be realized from the sale of the 500 life memberships above referred to.

It was the consensus of opinion among leading members of the Capital City club that an up-to-date country club house and golf course were essential to the club's future success. The strong attraction exercised by a country establishment was demonstrated by an increase of 300 members following the lease of Brookhaven. The offer made by the owners of Brookhaven seemed to every member who looked into it to be one which the club could not afford to decline. The value of the property had certainly advanced in two years, the club had expended $30,000 in improvements, the purchase price was $100,000, whereas the price named in the option, and on top of these valuable considerations the Brookhaven club house would be remodeled without cost to the club.

W. N. OPPORTUNITY.

For these reasons the advisability of accepting the offer was immediately apparent to the entire membership of the club and the resolutions authorizing the transaction went through without opposition.

Work on the remodeling will be started at once and will be completed in time for the use of the remodeled building during a large portion of the summer.

In addition to disposing of the Brookhaven matter, the members Monday night nominated officers for the ensuing year. Councilman W. T. Gentry, the popular president, declined to accept the nomination for re-election, and after a long vote of thanks had been tendered to Colonel Gentry for his splendid services to the club, the nominations were accordingly made as follows:

President—Edward H. Inman.
Vice President—James D. Robinson.
Secretary—Treasurer—Edward Austin.
Governing Board—Two-year term, U. S. S. Atkinson, three-year term, J. Epps Brown, John S. Cohen, Milton Dargatzis, and Jack Lewis. Three to be elected.

The ballots of the members upon these nominations are being cast Tuesday, the polls being open from noon until 9 o'clock p. m.

H. Kreisshaber, will appear before the investigating committee of the police board Friday night.

Police assistance in dealing with street beggars will also be asked by the Associated Charities. It is thought, and perhaps other reforms in the handling of prisoners at the barracks, will be urged.

Besides Mr. Kreisshaber, those on the committee are Joe Logan, secretary of the Associated Charities; Linton C. Hopkins, Jack Lewis, C. Woodford, and E. H. Goodhart.

COUNCIL VOTES $1,700 FOR BRANCH LIBRARY

New Carnegie Institution at Capitol and Georgia Avenues

The city council Monday afternoon adopted a resolution providing for the annual appropriation of $1,700 for the maintenance of the branch library which will be erected at the corner of Georgia and Capitol avenues by the Carnegie Foundation.

The terms of the agreement with the Carnegie Foundation, which will erect the library building and equip it at a total cost of $100,000, provide that the city will donate the lot and agree to maintain the institution.

F. G. POWERS DYING IN NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

A dispatch from Newport News, Va., Monday tells of the dying condition there of F. G. Powers, a retired business man of Decatur.

There was no one at the Powers residence Monday, and inquiry developed the information that Mr. Powers had gone to Newport News about a week ago. He was apparently in perfect health at that time.

Some time ago Mr. Powers, while hunting, accidentally shot himself in the foot, but had recovered from the wound.

Additional porch space, which is very desirable. The kitchen layout will be rearranged, together with the storage rooms, pantries, etc., in such a way as to give more efficient service, and in accomplishing this the boiler room will be moved to the space now occupied by the shop.

The main club room on the first floor will be changed and rearranged to cover the present arrangement, but on the outside there will be extensive additions which will contribute wonderfully to the increased comfort of the members.

Across the front will be added a porch and porte cochere so that vehicles can arrive and depart under cover. On each end of the building will be added a colonnade to cover the present terraces. On the porch across the back of the building will be added a roof, and this porch also will be equipped with windows and screens, so that it can be used both in summer and winter. It overlooks the lake and commands a splendid view of the golf course.

THE NEW ROOF GARDEN.

The club was accordingly dissolved, but Hazleton, who had been president of the old sprang a new club with twenty members, with a waiting room still at 11 Walton street, and with Hazleton still at the head. "I don't want too much money," said Mr. Hazleton, "expected to make a good deal later, at a time when the market for transportation had time had not yet come."

He said the club would continue, with its old members, doing business at the old stand.

CALLS COOGLER CHAMPION COLLECTOR OF ALIMONY

Recorder Johnson Puts Probation Officer's System Up to City Council

Probation Officer J. Sid Coogler has been Atlanta's champion alimony collector, according to communication from Judge George E. Johnson, which was read to council Monday afternoon.

In the last five years, since Atlanta's probation officer has been adjusting marital troubles of unhappy couples who appeared to him without forcing them to the expense and unpleasantness of court proceedings, he has collected $18,000 from husbands and paid that sum to their neglected wives.

Judge Johnson says that in the few months he has been recorder, Mr. Coogler has continued with this work known as "class B" probation, and in that period he has collected $250.

By a recent order of Judge Johnson and the police board, Mr. Coogler has been instructed to discontinue "class B" probation, pending action by council.

In his letter Judge Johnson puts the matter before council, with the recommendation that suitable legislation be enacted to make this work legal, if council wants it continued. The letter was referred to the ordinance committee.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY THOMAS W. BURGESS.

Peter Rabbit sat in the dear old Briar Patch looking out over the Green Meadows. The Merry Breezes were playing and playing toward the Green Forest. Presently Peter saw a little spot of red. It came out from the edge of the Green Forest and disappeared among the grasses of the Green Meadows. Peter watched. Presently he caught another glimpse of it moving very slowly, very carefully, over toward the place where Dainty Meadow Mouse lived.

Peter sat up very straight and watched. He saw new power in that little red spot meant. He knew that Reddy Fox was out hunting for his breakfast.

"Goodness!" exclaimed Peter, "I hope Dainty Meadow Mouse has got his eyes open."
Presently Reddy crouched down and began to crawl on his stomach. Peter knew what that meant. He knew that when Reddy glowed that he was using very close to the one he is hunting Peter began to get anxious. It seemed to him that he just couldn't get still there and see Dainty Meadow Mouse caught. He must do something, he just must! But what could he do? There wasn't time for him to go over there himself to warn Dainty, and even if there had been, it wouldn't have been safe for him to go so far from the dear old Briar Patch.

Now, Peter is very fond of Dainty Meadow Mouse, however, you know, Dainty was a Quaddy and Peter was a Quaddy and all Quaddies are bound to help all other Quaddies in time of danger. Presently Peter saw Reddy Fox to the place where Dainty and Nanny Meadow Mouse were at play. For once Dainty had forgotten to watch out for danger. It isn't often that Dainty forgets, but there are few in the world who do not forget once in a while. Dainty was no different from the rest of the Jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun was shining his very best. It was very beautiful down there among the meadow grasses. It was good to be alive and happy. Dainty and Nanny were doing nothing but how happy they were. It just didn't seem possible that there could be danger where everything was so beautiful.

Reddy Fox crept and crept nearer and nearer without making a sound. His eyes were wide open and he was waiting for the good breakfast which was just setting his hind legs under him. He was just setting his hind legs under him when a sharp scream came from his head. Peter heard that scream. It was the harsh voice of Nanny Jay, and he was giving warning to Dainty and Nanny Meadow Mouse. No one had noticed Sam. Sam was sitting on the edge of the Green Meadows and he had waited to make sure that Reddy really was some one. Then on silent wings he had flown out until he could see Dainty and Nanny Meadow Mouse and just in the nick of time he had given them warning.

That is a way Sam has of doing. Many and many a time he has saved the lives of some of his little neighbors by giving warning of danger in just this way. Of course, Dainty and Nanny Meadow Mouse scampered into their holes at the first sound of Sam's voice. Of course, Reddy Fox flew into a terrible rage and said unkind things to Sam. Sam, however, was Sam. Sam just laughed, for that also is a way he has of doing.

Over in the dear old Briar Patch Peter saw all of this and gave a great sigh of relief. Then he grew thoughtful. It was only the day before he had told Sam that there was no good in him and so, of course, that he could not be a Quaddy. Yet, here was Sam doing a good deed and saving Dainty and Nanny Mouse when no one else could. Peter suddenly made up his mind. He would call another meeting of the Quaddies at once.
